Abstract

The purpose of village financial management training is to improve the village financial management apparatus to be more transparent, accountable, participatory, orderly and budget disciplined, and to increase the knowledge of village officials of the important roles of village regulations as a legal umbrella in managing village finance. The research method was conducted through Focus Group Discussion which was attended by fifteen cipacing village officials, Cipacing Village, Jatinangor Subdistrict, Sumedang Regency. The results obtained were that the village officials had agreed to make village regulations, but they failed to implement them. Therefore, it is recommended that the village community who do not yet have a village regulation, for example, the regulation about carik land, levies or quotes to the villagers, and others, must be immediately agreed to issue the regulations as long as they get agreement from the villagers and follow the legal umbrella above: the regent regulations, the governor regulations and the 1945 Constitution.

INTRODUCTION

Accountability is an important requirement in public management developed in a democratic country (Brodkin, 2008). Accountability for decisions given to public officials to explain and ensure they have properly supported, behaved ethically, and are responsible for their performance (Bovens, 2007; Dubnick 2003; Mulgan, 2000; Romzek & Ingraham 2000). In Bovens’s view (2007: 447-448) this phenomenon is referred to as accountability deficit, the condition of the occurrence of dysfunctionalness of various established accountability mechanisms, which results in low legitimacy of the government. The results of the Carlitz (2013) study show that the urgency of bureaucratic accountability in implementing programs for the benefit of society is something that must be addressed as a necessity. This is because the community as the target group of a program always demands transparency and accountability in the budget process. Factors influencing village financial management are the implementation of a rural financial system (siskeudes), to promote transparency and accountability in managing village finance, there is already a Rural Financial System (Siskeudes). Research conducted by Andini et al. (2015) shows empirically the effect of applying the financial accounting system area to the quality of the financial reporting area.

Putri Wahyuningsih and Kiswanto (2016), the results of their research show that technical guidance (bimtek) and Understanding the main tasks and significance, Meanwhile, village financial planning has no planningsignificant to the accountability of village financial management. of implementation village government. Abdul Kadir et al. (2017) shows the results of their research using the study population are villages in Kebumen Regency involved in village financial management. The sample was 107 village officers from 38 villages, while the data was collected using a questionnaire. The data is then processed using descriptive and multiple linear regression analysis with SPSS version 21. Analytical tests of multiple linear regression show that understanding the accountability variables of village financial management partially influences village financial accountability, while understanding the tasks and functions of village governance and understanding technical assistance variables village financial management significantly affects the accountability of village financial management.

Tuti Amalya et al. (2017) showed the results of their research that Administrative Capacity west lombok regency had a negative effect on village financial management, organizational commitment had a positive effect on village financial management. While the different results show that the application of the village financial system (siskeudes) does not affect village financial management. In addition, village financial management also does not affect accountability. The results of this test will then be retested in further research with larger samples and the determinants of broader rural financial management and their implications for accountability. Fatmawati et al. (2018), Their results show that prevention of misuse of village funds is carried out on the side of the following accountability report: synchronizing perceptions of the regulations used, conducting village government accounting standards, verifying funds using realization reports, delegating authorization between the Ministry of Village and the Directorate General of Guidance from the Government Village Ministry of Internal Affairs, and synchronize understanding of the presentation of accountability reports. Anggreani Yunita and Christianingrum (2018) showing the results of their research that villages in Bangka Regency have fulfilled the accountability principle of 5 (five) starting from planning, implementation and reporting when measured from 5 (five) principles of accountability consisting of Transparency, Obligation, Control, Responsibility and Responsiveness.

Village Finance is a state budget that is intended for villages and is transferred through the district/city regional budget (APBD) and prioritized for the implementation of development and empowerment of rural communities. The Village Financial Program is the first in Indonesia, but also the first and the largest in the world. Therefore, the evaluation of village finance is necessary to carry out. Of course it requires technical guidance from various professions so that the evaluation of village finance can run effectively. Thus, Padjadjaran University (UNPAD) is willing to share knowledge through Community Service Program (KKN) and Community Service Activities (PKM). UNPAD is one of the State Higher Education in Indonesia which was established on September 11, 1957.

Evaluation (of village finance management) is needed to ensure that there is no deviation at each stage of the village finance management. In general, the evaluation process is carried out from the planning stage to the village finance accountability report. The process of implementing evaluations by the central government is carried out in a synergic and integrated manner. This is very necessary to ensure that the allocation of the village finance is in accordance with the priorities set and to ensure that the achievement of output can be maximized. In order to make the evaluation process more effective, sanction is needed to implemented if there is a deviation in the management of village finance. Based on Law No.20 Year 2003, Padjadjaran University is obliged to realize its duties significantly in this case through Community Service Program and Community Service Activities (PKM) by conducting PKM at Cipacing Village which is located at Jl. GKPN No. 54, Cipacing Village, Jatinangor Subdistrict, Sumedang Regency, West Java Province. Cipacing Village is one of the fostered villages of Padjadjaran University.

Cipacing Village is one of the 12 villages in Jatinangor Subdistrict, Sumedang Regency. Based on the data from Jatinangor, since 2014, Cipacing Village has a rural status as a self-sufficient village (desa swasembada). Administratively, Cipacing Village is divided into three hamlets. The number of RW and RT are 17 and 68, respectively. Cipacing Village has an area of 179 hectares. In 2013, Cipacing Village had a population of 14,321 inhabitants, the largest population compared to the number of other villagers in the Jatinangor Subdistrict. The population is 6,996 male and 7,325 female. The number of the head of family is 3,431. In addition to the development of the industrial sector, handicrafts and trade activities, the village’s income is the largest among all the villages in Jatinangor Subdistrict in Sumedang Regency, West Java Province. KKN and PKM that are held may be useful to assist the Village Apparatus Organizations in managing their finance starting from the village finance planning, preparation to financial reporting as stated earlier.

CONCLUSION

The method used in this study was Focus Group Discussion (FGD) which was attended by fifteen Cipacing village officials, Cipacing Village, Jatinangor Subdistrict, Sumedang Regency. The village community does not yet have village regulations regulation about tanah carik, levies or quotes to the villagers. For example, the regulation in taking levies on surface water will be applied if water becomes very difficult to obtain. Therefore, the researcher recommended that as long as the villagers and the village officials agree to make village regulations, the village regulations can be established as long as they follow the regulations above, namely regent regulations, governor regulations and the 1945 Constitution. Therefore, it is recommended that the village should design village regulations that refer to the applicable law referring to the 1945 Constitution. In addition, it is suggested that the village apparatus use tabelaris for each transaction account done in the village to control the village finance management so that it can be said that financial management has not been accountable. The results of this study are in line with research conducted by Mulgan (2000), Romzek and Ingraham (2000), Dubnick (2003), Bovens (2007), Brodkin (2008), Carlitz (2013), Andini et. al (2015), Putri and Kiswanto (2016), Abdul Kadir et. al (2017), Amalia Diamantina (2017), Inten Meutia and Liliana (2017), Fatmawati et al (2018), but this research contradicts the research conducted by Denok Kurniasih et.al (2017), Tuti Amalya et. al (2017), Anggraini and Christianigrum (2018).
